the whole cost and responsibility of an expedition, the French Government was only saved from this dilemma by the diplomaticy of them at the spot. The convention was not ratified, and a few days later the allied squadron of eighteen ships, British, French, American and Dutch, left the harbor bound for the Straits.

A new era in the history of French relations will probably take date from this first step by a combination of four Treaty Powers for the assertion of their common rights—so long and persistently trampled upon by the Daimio of Nagasaki, and now so triumphantly and manly victoriously vindicated.
